

This program uses DFS to find the number of children a node possesses. We make the assumption that we may greedily remove edges which connect even components to find the optimal number of edges we may remove from the tree to satisfy our constraints.

We remove an edge if the node we are traversing has an odd number of children, and if the node we are traversing is not the root node.

Time complexity: $O(n)$.